

After the miracle of birth, a prayer for survival.

After four weeks in a hospital bed at Parker Adventist Hospital's BirthPlace unit, Aimee delivered twins – a boy and a girl. It was a joyful moment, but there were complications – times two. Instead of going to the WellBaby nursery, her children were quickly moved down the hall to Parker Adventist Hospital's state-of-the-art neonatal intensive care unit (NICU). Breathing was just one of many health issues facing the twins, but Aimee and her husband, Michael, had faith. Parker Adventist Hospital's team of NICU experts ensured that after many long weeks of care, there were tears of joy when Aimee and Michael brought their babies home. That's why Parker Adventist Hospital is here.
